Stockton University, one of the nation's top public universities and recognized for its commitment to student-centered education, seeks a strategic, experienced and visionary leader to serve as Vice President for Student Affairs (VPSA). Reporting to President Joe Bertolino and serving as a member of the Senior Leadership Team, the Vice President will lead a staff of 120 full-time employees and engage in strengthening a vibrant and future-oriented Student Affairs division.

The University

Stockton University is an ambitious public regional undergraduate and graduate comprehensive university with a strong dedication to student belonging and success. Stockton takes seriously its role as an Anchor Institution to strengthen the southern New Jersey region through education, advocacy and action.

Beginning in fall 2024, Stockton embarked on a new strategic planning process to help chart the course for the university's success in the coming years. The Strategic Planning Steering Committee and working groups of faculty, staff, students, alumni and community members are collaborating to identify key priorities and themes for the next strategic plan, blending in President Joe Bertolino's vision for Stockton.

More about Stockton University is available later in this document and at stockton.edu.

The Division

Stockton's Division of Student Affairs partners with Academic Affairs and other divisions/offices to enhance and elevate the student experience and advance holistic well-being. Student Affairs is a core component of the University with a high level of complexity in scope, a broad range of internal, state and federal responsibilities, and expected exemplary fiscal management. The Division of Student Affairs is supported by 120 full-time and 250 part-time employees across 19 departments and includes a total budget of $20 million. Student Affairs supports student success through student health and wellness; advocacy, belonging, and campus standards; student living and learning; student engagement and community development; student transitions, access, and retention; and athletics and recreation. The VPSA also acts as a strategic partner and coach to both non-union and union team members, fostering an environment that supports students academically, intellectually, personally, and emotionally.

The Leader

The successful Vice President for Student Affairs (VPSA) will be an established student-centric leader who is collaborative, innovative and action-oriented. The VPSA will bring a deep knowledge of best and promising practices for advancing student success and a commitment to fostering a sense of belonging.

The VPSA will be a strategic thinker using data to inform decisions. The VPSA will cultivate a healthy work environment and utilize an in-depth knowledge of the cycles and rhythms of university student life while working with a range of student populations (undergraduate, graduate, residential and commuting students, traditional-age students, and adult learners) with a wide array of academic and personal interests and ambitions.

As a part of the President's Senior Leadership Team, Stockton's next VPSA will advance innovation, build strategic programs, and promote inclusive success strategies among a diverse student body. In addition to their own development, the VPSA will actively support the professional growth and development of staff and will work well in an environment that values a high level of ethical behavior, professionalism, accountability, and collaboration. Throughout the institution, the VPSA will be a leader who promotes a healthy culture in alignment with the priorities of Stockton University.

The Position

Reporting directly to President Joe Bertolino, the VPSA is the University's senior Student Affairs officer and serves as a strategic partner with the president, provost, and the Senior Leadership Team. In this role, the VPSA provides direction and guidance to advance and support the University's priorities of increased retention and graduation rates and a strong sense of community for residential, non-residential and online students.

The VPSA works collaboratively with faculty to develop strong co-curricular programming and credentialing to create an intellectually rich student experience, enabling students to see connections between the classroom and the world beyond.

The VPSA represents and advocates for all students over multiple campuses and satellite locations, ensuring student programs and services are responsive to students' changing needs. The VPSA is responsible for developing, implementing, and enforcing policies and procedures that promote both fair treatment and responsible conduct by students. This leader maintains strong and effective relationships with a wide range of students, their families and supporters, administrators, staff, and faculty.

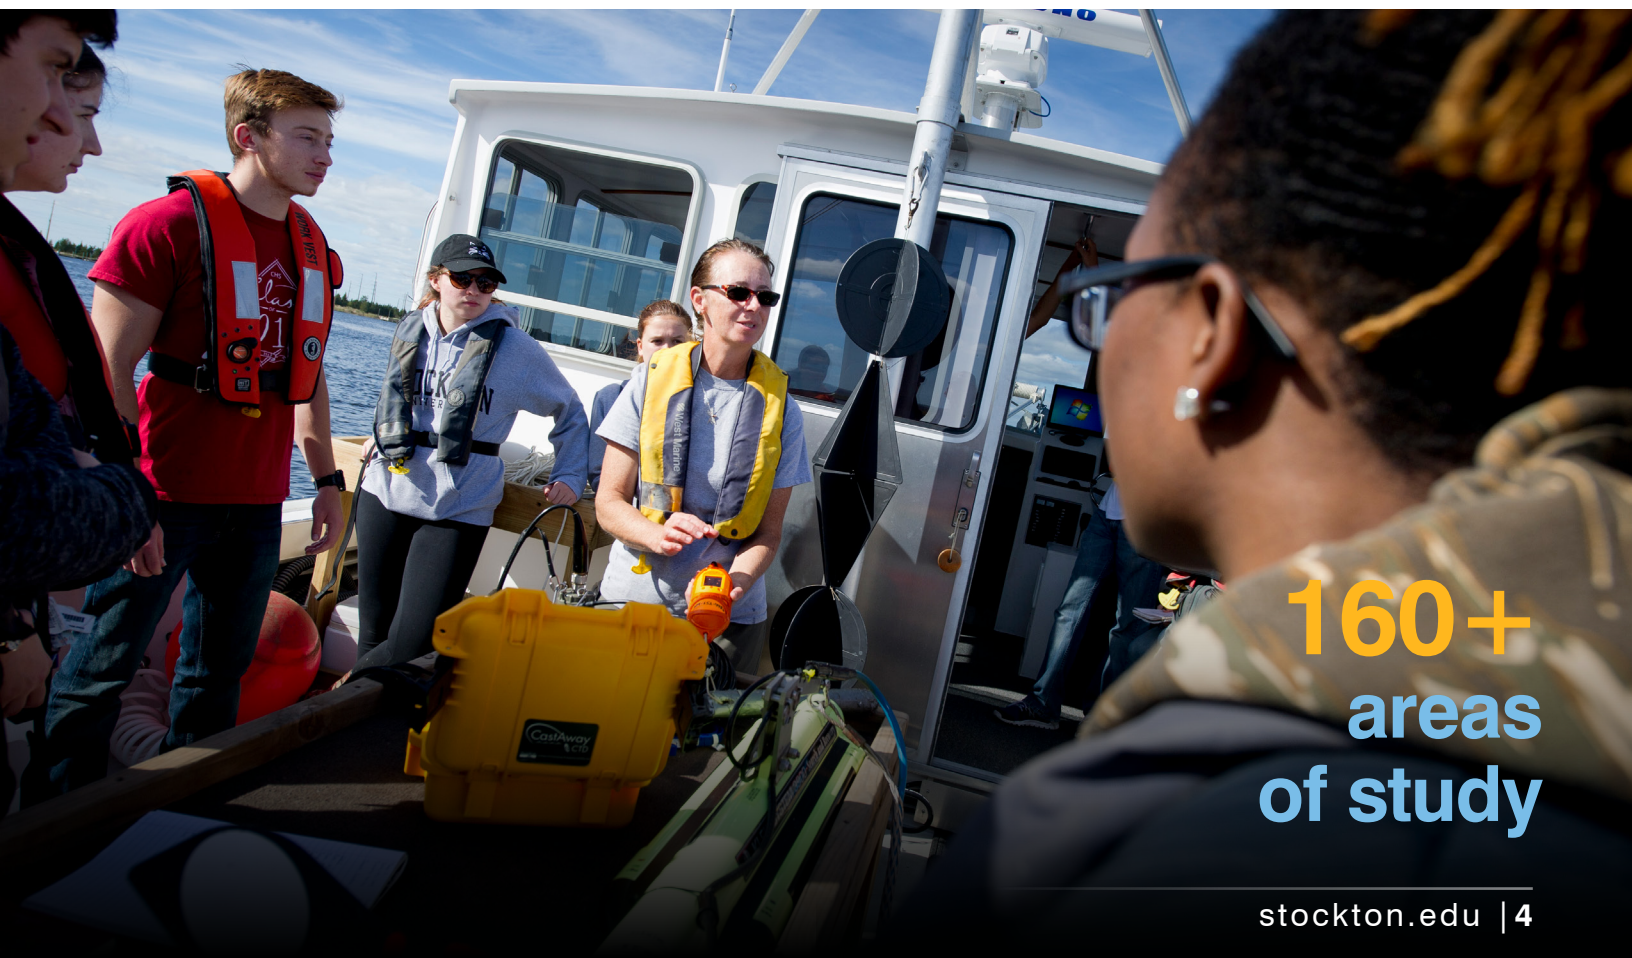

Responsibilities

Leadership and Strategy: Provide empowered and supportive leadership, strategy development and execution for the division comprised of the following strategic areas: Athletics and Campus Recreation; Student Advocacy, Belonging and Campus Standards; Student Health and Wellness; Student Living and Learning; and Student Transitions, Access and Retention. Work collaboratively to set the strategic direction, empower team members, and set a high level of expectation for engagement and accountability to enhance the student experience in alignment with the University's strategic priorities. Manage and actively seek grants that support student-experience goals. Cultivate relationships with community partners to enhance Stockton's visibility, support opportunities for student civic engagement and learning while creating positive regional impact.

Student Engagement and Success: Promote a positive student sense of belonging by maintaining open, accessible, effective, and frequent communication with both student leaders and students at large, serving as their advocate for the co-curricular needs of both on-campus and online students. Advance student success by implementing strategies that reduce gaps among student populations. Advocate for continuous improvement in student support, services and campus infrastructure to enhance student learning, experiences, satisfaction, and retention; develop and implement policies that promote student well-being, engagement, and success. Take ownership of co-curricular planning, utilization of technology (EAB a.k.a. Ospreys Navigate), and other related projects as a result of the strategic planning process. Align programs, services, and student employment with research-centered learning outcomes and/or evidence-based practices that enhance academic and post-graduation success.

Cross-functional Collaboration and Communication: Collaborate broadly with the Provost, academic departments, faculty, Enrollment Management, Facilities and other University leaders to create integrated learning experiences outside the classroom. Represent Stockton on all matters of student life, serving as a liaison for students, the administration, and external stakeholders on the national, state and regional levels.

Leadership: Demonstrate excellent leadership skills, placing a high premium on building trust and transparency, promoting team morale, and furthering an innovative and inclusive environment that attracts and retains high-quality professionals. Support, coach and ensure that the Student Affairs division staff understand how their work contributes to the broader vision, mission, goals and values of the University. Bolster internal communications and delegate effectively to ensure maximum efficiency across the division.

In alignment with other members of the Senior Leadership Team, actively plan, model, and promote a healthy divisional and campus culture. Support the development of a positive campus climate and maintain a community grounded in the Ethic of Care (Dignity, Respect, Kindness, Compassion and Civility). Serve as a champion of inclusivity and belonging across all aspects of campus life and encourage intellectual inquiry and development.

Strategic Alignment and Efficiency: Lead the division in a fiscally responsible and data-informed manner and ensure the division’s finances and operations are aligned with Stockton’s strategic direction. Contribute to the development and implementation of financial practices that utilize sound assessment and monitoring practices. Implement best practices to assess student success outcomes.

Compliance: Share a commitment to providing thought leadership and oversight in abiding by federal, state and institutional laws, policies and procedures. In collaboration with the appropriate campus office, address any form of discrimination and harassment. Understand, communicate, revise and implement fair and appropriate application of university policies. Ensure compliance with Middle States requirements and other accreditors, as well as other guidelines within scope.

Core Competencies, Qualifications and Characteristics (Knowledge, Skills and Abilities)

A highly visible, results-oriented, and student-focused leader, the successful candidate will have a demonstrated higher education career characterized by building upon successful student engagement and approaching challenges with a nimble, innovative mindset, and work with the team to develop an optimistic, can-do spirit.
